

STUDENT: During what period did downtown Fresno thrive?

TEACHER: ⇨ Between the 1880s and World War II

STUDENT: What were two of Fresno's most beautiful architectural buildings that are now demolished?

TEACHER: ⇨ Fresno County Courthouse (demolished), the Fresno Carnegie Public Library

STUDENT: What former building is currently known as Grand 1401?

TEACHER: ⇨ San Joaquin Light Power Building

STUDENT: Which one of Fresno's hotels burned down?

TEACHER: ⇨ Hughes Hotel

STUDENT: When was the Fresno County Courthouse demolished?

TEACHER: ⇨ CANNOTANSWER

STUDENT: What is the Pacific Southwest Building currently known as?

TEACHER: ⇨ CANNOTANSWER

STUDENT: What happened to the Bank of Italy Building?

TEACHER: ⇨ CANNOTANSWER

STUDENT: What was the Grand 1401 building renamed as?

TEACHER: ⇨ CANNOTANSWER

STUDENT: What is the name of the hotel that was renamed the Grand 1401?

TEACHER: ⇨ CANNOTANSWER

Section:Fresno, California6

Context: Between the 1880s and World War II, Downtown Fresno flourished, filled with electric Street Cars, and contained some of the San Joaquin Valley's most beautiful architectural buildings. Among them, the original Fresno County Courthouse (demolished), the Fresno Carnegie Public Library (demolished), the Fresno Water Tower, the Bank of Italy Building, the Pacific Southwest Building, the San Joaquin Light Power Building (currently known as the Grand 1401), and the Hughes Hotel (burned down), to name a few. CANNOTANSWER