

STUDENT: What was French military presence at start of war?

TEACHER: ⇨ "" (no French regular army troops were stationed in North America)

STUDENT: How much British military was in North America at start of War?

TEACHER: ⇨ "" (few British troops)

STUDENT: What was normal British defense?

TEACHER: ⇨ "" (mustered local militia companies, generally ill trained and available only for short periods, to deal with native threats, but did not have any standing forces.)

STUDENT: What was French military presence at end of war?

TEACHER: ⇨ "" (CANNOTANSWER)

STUDENT: What was French military presence at start of peace?

TEACHER: ⇨ "" (CANNOTANSWER)

STUDENT: How much British military was in North America at end of War?

TEACHER: ⇨ "" (CANNOTANSWER)

STUDENT: How much British military was in South America at start of War?

TEACHER: ⇨ "" (CANNOTANSWER)

STUDENT: What was abnormal British defense?

TEACHER: ⇨ "" (CANNOTANSWER)

Section:French and Indian War11

Context: At the start of the war, no French regular army troops were stationed in North America, and few British troops. New France was defended by about 3,000 troupes de la marine, companies of colonial regulars (some of whom had significant woodland combat experience). The colonial government recruited militia support when needed. Most British colonies mustered local militia companies, generally ill trained and available only for short periods, to deal with native threats, but did not have any standing forces. CANNOTANSWER